
DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

DAILY, EXCEPT SUNDAY.

ROSSER & MCCARTHY,
Proprietors.

WEDNESDAY EVE., DEC. 8, 1886.

There was a record of 137 deaths in Cincinnati the past week.

Finalist exhibition at Cincinnati cleared $6,000 over and above all expenses.

The postoffice at Covington handled a little more than 100,000 letters and packages the past month.

The estate of late Archbishop Purcell is being distributed among his creditors by the court at Cincinnati.

For the week ending December 4th, there were $81,011 and silver dollars issued from the mints, against 699,393 for the corresponding period last year.

Among the political plans that fell to Kentuckians last week was a $1,000 clerkship in the Surgeon General's office. Joseph R. Woodruff is the fortunate individual.

CONGRESSMAN LAFAYETTE says Colonel John Young Brown, of Henderson, wants to succeed Senator Beck, and will shortly make his wants known to the people of the State.

The ordinary expenditures of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, amounted to a little more than $287,000,000. Of this sum $63,500,000 were paid out for pensions.

C. P. HUNTINGTON will gain control of the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago Railroad within ninety days, if a report from New York is true. The great railway king is gradually enlarging his vast system of roads.

It seems the Snow King has been having a big time down South in the past few days. Throughout Tennessee the fall is the heaviest ever known, averaging from two to four feet in depth. At other places the fall was unprecedented.

The Montgomery Circuit Court is in session at Mt. Sterling with an unusually large docket—the largest, in fact, since the war. It consists of 127 criminal, 208 equity and 133 ordinary cases. The lawyers of that section ought to be happy.

The United States Circuit Court is in session at Covington, with Judge Barr presiding. Between one and two hundred non-residents from the mountain counties are in attendance. Sixty indictments were reported by the grand jury yesterday.

For the year ending June 30, 1886, the revenue of the Government amounted to $12,700,000 more than the previous year, while the expenditures were $17,700,000 less than 1885. Under Democratic rule, the government is being economically administered. A saving in one year of nearly $18,000,000 is something the Republicans would hardly have effected.

At a recent session of the Circuit Court in Laurel County about two hundred indictments were reported by the grand jury. Of the number, twenty-five were for selling votes at the late election. Claims amounting to about $4,000 were allowed against the State, and the sum would have been larger had the Judge and Attorney failed to exercise the closest precaution.

LABOR has been more abundantly employed during the past four months than ever in the history of the country. The percentage of idle to employed labor is lower at this time than since the boom of 1882. The cost of living is estimated at 18 per cent. less than then, and the purchasing power of money is put at 30 per cent. greater by some authorities. These conditions account largely for the unprecedented activity in house and shop building.—Philadelphia Star.

A TEN-YEAR-OLD boy was found on the street in Cincinnati the other day too drunk to tell his name. A short time previous to this the Work-house Directors released a saloon-keeper who was serving a sentence for selling liquor to minors. Comment is hardly necessary. The best way to compel obedience of the law is to enforce it to the letter. We have the law. What is needed is a certainty of the execution.

SEVERAL parties have been indicted at London, Laurel County, this State, for selling their votes at the late election, which brings forth the following pointed remarks from the Leader:

There is entirely too much of this traffic in votes in this country. The floating element wields the balance of power, and any man, regardless of his qualifications to hold office, can be elected if he can afford to pay sufficient cash. It would be better for all concerned if these people were disfranchised. A man who will sell his prerogative as a citizen is not worthy of citizenship, and we hope these cases will be vigorously prosecuted.

The truth of the above remarks is recognized by all, and the day is not far distant when such "citizens" will meet with a punishment that will fit the case.

Opinions of the Press.

The Louisville Commercial says: "The message is devoid of rhetorical flourish. It is carefully written, and is not lacking in interest for the general reader."

Speaking of the President's message, the Cincinnati Enquirer says: "Altogether it is a paper which will not simply challenge attention, but command it. At the same time we are impelled to the suggestion that some of the measures suggested therein will meet the approval of the present Congress."

The President's message is a terse, strong, many document, and will make a good model for all future Democratic Presidents. Seldom have public measures been so capably handled or brought into so complete a harmony with the ascertained needs of the people of the whole country.—Louisville Post.

The Standard, of London, Eng., says: "President Cleveland's message is a sensible and statesmanlike production and eminently pacific. A note of menace is not heard. Although in describing the fisheries question he throws undue blame upon the Canadian fisheries, yet not a word is spoken to excite hostility or rekindle strife."

The message is, on the whole, an excellent, business-like document, giving ample evidence of conscientious and painstaking work, and furnishing abundant testimony, if it were needed, to the patriotism and public spirit of its author. Mr. Tilden, describing Mr. Cleveland, once said of him, "he is a man who would rather write a bad paper for himself than have a friend write him a good one." The present paper is not a bad, but a good one, and it is obviously the product of the President's own genius. It marks progress and betrays improvement in many ways; notably in an easy familiarity with prevailing ideas and less of a certain crude pragmatism which has sometimes shown itself in Mr. Cleveland's writing. In tone it is that of an honest man, and, whether we agree with all its conclusions or not, we are bound to respect its intelligence and candor.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

MAJOR M. C. JOHNSON, one of the most prominent attorneys of Lexington, died last night. He was eighty years of age.

We have heard of two instances this week that illustrate the good results being brought about by the new Revenue law. One citizen who has heretofore been assessed at about $20,000 or $25,000 voluntarily gave in his property for taxation at $50,000. Another who was assessed last year at a little over $2,000, reported $8,000 this year for taxation. And yet there are some people who want this law repealed.

MEMPHIS COUNTY has about an even dozen candidates in the field for the Legislature, and the mountaineers are promised an exciting contest. The main question at issue is the election of a United States Senator to succeed Senator Beck. Some of the candidates have linked their political fate with that of the wily and disunited ex-Schoolman, while others favor Kentucky's honored son, Speaker Carlisle.

Timely Warning.
Huntington's Southside railroad, from the Big Sandy to the Licking, is being built by convicts and more convicts are being planted along the line of the Louisville Southern to do the work on that line. This is bad enough, but it is not so bad as using this felon labor to break up established mining communities. When the branch prison is completed, if the Democratic party doesn't put a stop to the working of convicts all over the State and confine this striped labor within walls, there will be no Democratic party left in Kentucky.—Louisville Times.

[Uncommunicated.]

Pithy Points from Washington.
What excuse can men offer for being engaged in the disreputable business of making drink for the neighbors, other than that there is money in the trade?

What do whiskey sellers give a man in exchange for his hard-earned money, other than red eyes, a shining nose, polished breath, bad credit, a diseased mind, a free sale for the venereal or galled, and lastly, loss of body and soul?

A man must certainly be void of conscience who can, day in and day out, serve to his neighbors and clients that which fomenters strife and discord, incites to crime and murder, and which will strike down his mother or father.

How can any man who has some look with complacency upon a business which is built on entrapment and on lies, and which has wove its deadly coils about them, forever claims them as his own offspring of vice and infamy?

How can any man who cares anything for the future of his own view with others than distrust and suspicion, a business which is built on entrapment and on lies, and which has wove its deadly coils about them, forever claims them as his own offspring of vice and infamy?

How is it possible for a man who looks to his sons for his honor and support, to entertain the whiskey trade in any of its branches anything but loathing, and for the men engaged in it the same contempt that he would for a murderer? The drunkard is incomparably the superior in everything that goes to make a man to the one that sells the liquor, whether it be by the barrel, jug or glass. The man who deals in the article which makes drunkards, no matter whether in large or small quantities, is the sworn enemy to innocence, to virtue, to manhood and to all else which makes life worth living.

There is no man of ordinary intelligence but knows that the whiskey business, besides being a foe to that which is of any value in life is the sworn ally of crime and murder; of anarchy and rioters; of jails and penitentiaries.

That the men who are engaged in the business of making drunkards should be viewed in their light, as the dire enemies of the household and State, and to be shunned as they would a pestilence.

An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shephard, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used, instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Buckle's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well."

Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Buckle's Arnica Salve at $2 per box by J. C. Fecor & Co., and P. Campbell & Co., of Aberdeen Ohio.
